

THE CRASH OF A GIANT AIRLINER. The Lawson airliner de luxe, the largest commercial plane in the world, hits a tree near Milwaukee on its maiden flight and crashes to the ground with the result pictured above. The four men aboard were uninjured. The plane, which was completed this spring for transcontinental service, has a wing spread of 124 feet and a carrying capacity of 26 persons, plus 6,000 pounds of mail and freight.

A NEW "BIG BERTHA" Looks like it. German, too. But it is aimed at the stars, not Paris. News dispatches tell us it is a new Berlin creation, the world's largest telescope—bigger even than the one at our own Lick Observatory—over seventy feet long and five feet in diameter. Perhaps the Teuton will now be able to see more clearly what's written for him in the heavens.

AFIRE AT SEA! The most fearful of marine hazards. The Japanese steamship Tokuyo Maru, on fire off the Oregon coast May 3. The U. S. Army transport Buford sighted the flames the night before this snap was made and arrived in time to rescue all but eight of the crew before the white-hot hull plunged to Davy Jones's locker.
